

CHILDHOOD ATTACHMENT

Understanding the child's emotional world, and how this impacts on their learning

This interactive and engaging half-day training focuses on attachment theory – a way of understanding how children see the world. It provides both theoretical and practical input, leaving practitioners better able to engage with the meaning behind the behaviour, helping all children to feel more secure, stable, and ready to learn.

By the end of this half-day, practitioners will:

- have a solid understanding of attachment, including some of the most up-to-date research on attachment styles and their impact on the classroom
- know how to identify attachment styles in children they teach, understand how these will impact on behaviour and learning, and devise practical strategies to address this.
- Have a greater understanding of their own attachment styles, and how these influence their behaviour in the classroom.
